African American Matriarchy: A Nation within a Nation

In this course, you will examine the matriarchal culture: how long it has existed; when it transitioned from matriarchy to patriarchy; and compare the Old and new matriarchal systems. African American myths, folklore, African mysticism, intuitive knowingness, dream, voodoo/vodon, and santeria—will be discussed in light of understanding how ancient African spirituality has carried over into modern day and the goddess worship that still exists among today’s black people on the continent. You will learn about the role of men in the first matriarchal systems that were described as socially/politically and economically egalitarian. You will also explore the role of the African American woman—why she remains invisible, and why she is portrayed as always angry, especially when she chooses to be visible. In addition, you will discuss the African American woman’s image as it is represented by Hollywood, in film, on TV, in the media, and on stage. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Latin American Cultures: The New Brazil—Carnival, Soccer and Corruption?
Like the United States, Brazil became a country of immigrants and their arrival and integration changed not only the political and economic order of this society, but also its culture. Come explore the distinctive richness of Brazil’s colonial experience, including the rise of the Casa Grande (plantation economy) and the creation of the Kingdom of Brazil, the only such imperial experiment in the Americas. Learn about the dissolution of the Kingdom, this country’s unique path to independence which was intimately linked with the local abolitionist movement. Analyze how blending European, African, and indigenous traditions became not just the central tenant of an independent Brazil but its driving force towards modernization. Learn how Brazil’s identity as the country of the future-economically dynamic and modern, culturally diverse, and on the leading edge—has been challenged by multiple corruption scandals and a crisis of confidence. Model Minorities or Struggling Immigrants: Asian Americans in the National Capital Region
Did you know that approximately three quarters of the National Capital Region’s Asian American populations are foreign-born? In this course, you will explore the complex and sometimes awkward dynamics of the Asian American experience in the capital region, with a focus on Montgomery County’s transformation as a 21st century community and the global/local connections. You will examine this distinct characteristic that has largely shaped the fastest-growing racial group’s life as new Americans. In addition, you will discuss the settlement patterns, professions of choice, community life, and political outlook.

Modern Spain
Explore contemporary Spain in light of different historical narratives that have emerged from the period of the political transition from dictatorship to democracy (1975 - present). Learn how the Civil War and the Francoist Regime framed current historical narratives. Contrast this with alternative narratives of “peripheral” nationalisms in Spain (Basque and Catalan) that have gained power in recent years. Examine how gender/sexual identity as well as narratives of ethnic and racial identities, of immigration have become essential to the Spain of today. Discover how these political/cultural changes have led to a flowering of cultural production. This course will draw on a range of cultural forms (novels, short stories, essays, film, music, dance, art, monuments, soccer). Students 60+ pay fee only.

The Art of Sketching
Whether you are an avid sketcher or new to the art, sketching allows you to record events such as a trip to a foreign land, a tour of a local garden, or a special occasion such as a birth or anniversary. Sketching can include sketches, drawings, or quick paintings. You can add short captions, notes, parts of conversations, and observations to create a journal. Sketches can also be used for planning an organic garden, creating a preliminary drawing for a painting or portrait, and providing an outlet for discovering solutions to a variety of problems. This course will teach you how to improve your observational skills while sketching with pen, pencil, or watercolor. You will have an opportunity to sketch outside. Bring supplies to the first class. Watercolor Advanced—For Creativity and Fun
Fun is the opening gambit of our specially designed watercolor class for students who are comfortable with the basics of watercolor and who want to explore alternative ways to paint. Learn to apply a variety of techniques, such as dry brush, wet-on-wet, glazing, stippling, controlled spray, lifts, and graded washes. Emphasizing textural effects in underpainting, will give you a different place to start each week. Each class begins with an analysis of the previous week’s work, followed by a demonstration of hands-on techniques for you to emulate in class. Learn to create masterful paintings from direct observation and sketches, as well as by assembling printed reference materials. Half sheet paintings (on the order of 15” x 22”) are suggested for a successful creative journey. Bring supplies to the first class. Supply lists are available on the LLI website. How to Decipher Paintings II (NEW)

Survey of Western Art from Rococo to Realism
In this course, you will examine the most significant developments in painting created in Western Europe during the 18th and the first half of the 19th century, including the movements of Rococo, Neoclassicism, Romanticism, & Realism. You will continue to employ visual analysis “seeing” the stylistic elements of color, line, and the composition, the iconography, and the context - connecting the art style to the history and the culture of the time. Putting your deciphering skills to work, you will learn how to understand the most important works by painters such as Boucher, Fragonard, Gainsborough, Chardin, David, and Courbet. The Making of Impressionism
Have you ever looked at a painting by Monet, Degas, or Renoir and wondered, how did they do that? It seems so effortless: colors that sing, water that sparkles and wind you could almost feel blowing through the canvas. Edgar Degas once said, “I assure you, no art was ever less spontaneous than mine.” Today we think of Impressionism as one of the most popular movements in art history, but that was not always the case. The young men and women who entered the rigid 19th century art world were outliers. With bravery and tenacity, they were determined to make art on their own terms. Take a new look at art history through the eyes of an artist, looking at paintings of the Impressionist movement: how they were made technically and historically. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Vermeer and the Masters of Genre Painting: Inspiration and Rivalry

Johannes Vermeer is one of the best-loved painters of all time, who captured quiet moments of beauty in everyday Dutch life. During this course, you will briefly examine the political and social changes taking place in the Netherlands, from 1650-1675, that influenced Dutch painters. You will explore Vermeer’s and his contemporaries’ techniques including linear perspective, grisaille, and velatura. In addition, you will analyze the camera obscura and understand how it was utilized by artists of the time. This course is running in conjunction with the upcoming landmark exhibition at the National Gallery of Art: Vermeer and the Masters of Genre Painting. While viewing their paintings in the exhibit, you will examine the artists in historical, artistic, and social context. No lecture on Vermeer would be complete without discussing the forger who fooled the Nazis, Han van Meegeren, and the greatest art hoax of the 20th century.

A Profile in Courage—John F. Kennedy
Kennedy’s Legacy—100 Years After His Birth

In 1954, John F. Kennedy wrote Profiles in Courage. This book provides the biographies of eight men who exhibited a dedication to their personal principles rather than party politics, or even constituent desires. These men suffered ostracism and political defeat for holding fast to their beliefs. Kennedy, a decade later, faced his own crises: the Bay of Pigs, the Cuban Missile Crisis, the second Berlin crisis, racial discord, the space race, and Vietnam. In this course, you will examine these crises and compare and contrast Kennedy’s actions with the men of Profiles in Courage. You will also explore the importance of these events and their impact. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Alexander Hamilton, Founding Father With Vision for Modern America

Lin-Manuel Miranda’s blending of hip-hop and history has enthralled theater-goers since the curtain went up on Hamilton: An American Musical in 2015. In this course, you will learn about the American icon who inspired this amazing production. From his humble beginnings as an orphan in the West Indies to his tragic encounter with Aaron Burr on the cliffs of Weehawken, Alexander Hamilton played a critical role in the founding of the United States. Through lecture and discussion, you will examine Hamilton’s remarkable career as a soldier, statesman, and thinker. In addition, you will explore the various ways he shaped today’s political dialogue and the modern U.S. financial system.

An Insight into Politics and Current Events

Late September will mark eight months after the inauguration of Donald Trump as the 45th President of the United States. You will examine the United States’ policies on NATO, NAFTA, immigration, climate change, budget, and other pressing issues. In addition, the nation will be less than a year from primaries for the House of Representatives, the Senate, and many governors’ races. An Insight Into Politics and Current Events will address all of these issues and many more. Join other students, every two weeks, to actively discuss current issues in the news. Topics of discussion will include: the political issues facing Montgomery County, Maryland; President Trump’s administration. The Democratic opposition of the President and its effectiveness; potential candidates and issues that will frame the 2018 elections; and other current issues contributed by you and your fellow students. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Central American Revolutions

In the 1980s, Central America was shaken by the revolutionary movements and civil wars that ultimately defined the decade—framed by some as a final battleground of the Cold War between the United States and the Soviet Union. In this course, you will briefly examine the history of the region since the eighteenth century, as well as basic concepts in the study of revolt and revolution. You will discuss the principal challenges that shaped the history of Central America since the early twentieth century, especially those associated with the rise of the repressive states between the 1930s and 1960s that lead to the crisis of the 1970s. You’ll explore the history of the revolutionary processes of Guatemala, Nicaragua, and El Salvador between the late 1970s and the early 1990s; and discover how these conflicts came to a resolution; and evaluate how successful each country has been in transitioning to a more just and democratic society. In addition, you will explore the unique ethnic, class, and regional tensions of Nicaragua, El Salvador, and Guatemala. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Right Wing Movements Today

Are the modern right wing movements a revival of fascism? Are they populist, reactionary, or revolutionary? Do they represent a coherent ideology or a simple rejection of 21st century modernity? This course focuses on the recent rise and increasing popularity/power of modern right wing movements world-wide. You will begin with a consideration of basic conceptual issues related to populism, 21st century sovereignty, modernity, and a comparison to fascism. Next you will explore these groups’ intellectual origins, their reach, and their scope, as well as their embrace of political violence and totalitarian models. You will discuss case studies, noting comparative continuities and regional peculiarities (the focus will range from the United States and Europe to Turkey and Latin America). The course will not only draw on recent scholarship but will consider art, propaganda, and film from the different regions. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Rockville, Maryland: 250 Years of History

Rockville, Maryland was settled by the 1750s and has a long and fascinating history. You will learn about its selection as the seat of Montgomery County government in 1776, its incorporation in 1860, and its phenomenal growth since World War II. You will discuss Rockville’s importance as a base for trade and legal matters for 250 years. You will explore the lives of the early residents, and those who passed through this area long before and since. This course will use a multi-media approach to bring Rockville history alive; as well as a guided walking tour of historic Rockville. Historical booklets and books written by the instructor will be available for those who may wish to purchase them. The United States Supreme Court and its Important Decisions
Did you know that The United States Constitution provides only for a Supreme Court? Do you know how the lower courts were created and what they consist of? During this course, you will explore the framework of the federal court system, identify the jurisdiction that each level of the federal court system possesses, and learn the differences between presenting cases at all three levels. You will discuss how the federal court system intersects with the executive and legislative branches of the government; and the “Advice and Consent” process through which judges nominated by the President are evaluated by the United States Senate. In addition, you will examine the decisions of the Supreme Court from a historical perspective and some of the famous justices who have sat on the court. The decisions of the court that will be examined are Marbury v. Madison, Dred Scott, Plessey vs. Ferguson, Brown v. the Board of Education, Roe vs. Wade, the Heller case, and the Citizens United case. Students 60+ pay fee only.

From Herbs to Designer Drugs: Medicine, Yesterday and Today
Ever wonder how your medicine evolved to where it is today? Want to know what part roots and herbs played in modern medicine? Come and explore the folklore, empiricism, and highly speculative theory of early drug therapy. Journey through the traditions of natural and alternative medicine to the rise of biomedical science in the 19th century. This journey led to a more rational understanding of disease and the mechanisms of drug action, eventually leading to the introduction of powerful new drugs and modern drug therapy. You will examine the fascinating history of medicine from herbs and roots to modern synthetic drugs and what you should know about medicine today. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Introduction to the Psychology of Personality
No doubt, you’ve heard the term personality, and you can probably describe your own or your friend’s personality. However, did you know that personality is one of the most theorized and most researched aspects of psychology? Do you want to know what makes up and defines a personality? In this course you will examine the varying definitions and views on the formation and maintenance of personality according to the major schools, which include the psychoanalytic, psychodynamic, behavioral, cognitive, social learning, biological, trait, and humanistic approaches. You will compare personality theories to determine the major similarities and differences in how each approach views personality development over the lifespan. And you will explore classic theory as well as current research that discusses the central theme to each theoretical approach and to what degree each approach is supported in the literature. In addition, you will discuss the methods used to study (i.e. case, study, correlation, and experimental) and assess (i.e., interview, objective, projective) personality. The Future of Planet Earth

Climate change is threatening the planet, with rising sea levels and extreme weather, including blizzards, floods, and drought. Meanwhile, the sixth great extinction may be underway, signaling the Anthropocene, a whole new geologic period caused by humanity and our devilishly clever ability to change the environment around us. Yet, we are also capable of solving the crises we create. Besides covering the environmental problems caused by humans, this course will discuss efforts to create a better future, from the environmental movement of the 1960s and ‘70s to more recent efforts to achieve sustainability, including the recently signed Paris climate agreement. Before the Storm (and During): British Literature, 1900-1918

The peaceful years of “Edwardian” England were productive ones for some of the British Isles’ most gifted writers. The so-called, “Irish Renaissance” was in full flower with the playwrights J. M. Synge and G. B. Shaw, the poet W. B. Yeats, and just after the “Great War,” James Joyce. Yeats and Shaw, along with Thomas Hardy and Joseph Conrad, were in their ripest years. E. M. Forster, D.H. Lawrence, Charlotte Mew and Katherine Mansfield were just beginning theirs. During this course, you will explore the poetry, drama and fiction, both humorous and troubling, of all these writers against a background of both national self-confidence and unease with that self-satisfaction. In addition, you will discuss the music and fine arts associated with this period of time. For the reading list, please check the LLI website. Students 60+ pay fee only.

Best American Short Stories

New content! Short stories have probably been created and shared since humans first began to sit around the fire in a cave at night. George Saunders claims short stories “are rarefied, dense meaning machines,” and Lorrie Moore says stories help us “see how other people make sense of things.” Stories may be meant to instruct, to warn, or just to entertain; some are sad and some are joyful, but all are thought-provoking. In this class, we will read significant stories and then share our various perspectives and insights, thus adding to their meaning and to our understandings of the world we live in. This class will read and discuss classic selections by David Sedaris, Children Playing before a Statue of Hercules, and contemporary work from The Best American Short Stories 2015, selected by T.C. Ella and Lena: 100 Years with The First Ladies of Vocal Jazz ◘ NEW
Do you remember the scatting and powerful voice of Ella Fitzgerald or the rich and emotional voice of Lena Horne? This year celebrates the 100th anniversary of the births of these two “First Ladies” of vocal jazz. In this course, you will explore the public careers, musical legacies, and family histories of these two very famous and very different performing artists. You will examine the place of female artists in the male-dominated world of jazz; the links between radio, cinema, and popular culture during and after World War II; and the politics of gender and race in American entertainment. In addition, you will learn how vocal jazz was used as propaganda and protest music at home and abroad. This course is timed to coincide with the Smithsonian Institution’s 2017 focus on women in the history of jazz in America-- and their influence on local jazz scenes in the Mid-Atlantic. Students 60+ pay fee only.

The Evolution of the Broadway Musical
How has the Broadway musical changed over the last 80 years? Using an historical perspective, the changes that took the Broadway Musical art form from a “gotta sing- gotta dance“ format of the 1930’s to the ability to reach serious topics up to the present day will be explored. How did musicals such as Anything Goes evolve into the genre that created Oklahoma, Carousel, and My Fair Lady? As time has advanced no story has been unable to be told in the Broadway musical format. You will discuss the composers, such as Lerner and Loewe, Rodgers and Hammerstein, Sondheim and Bernstein, as well as other creative teams that transitioned the musical. You will examine the way the characters presented the story of who they were in newly fashioned creative approaches and changes in style. You will gain an understanding of how story presentation has changed and the creative and technological advances that made new methods of storytelling in musical stage format possible. This five week course will move you through the decades of creative development from 1927 to the present featuring live song experts from many famous and popular musicals (Oklahoma, West Side Story, Cabaret, Chicago, to name a few).

The instructor, with his performance background and skilled tenor voice, will enhance the class with his own renditions of famous musical moments.

Wellness

Beginner Swimming

Did you take swimming lessons as a child but still do not feel confident in your abilities? Do you sit by the edge of the pool and watch others swim past? Do you wish you could swim as effortlessly as them? This course is for you! You will learn how to control your breathing; how to float; and how to perform four basic strokes - front crawl, back crawl, elementary backstroke, and breaststroke. You will gain the confidence needed to swim in both shallow and deep water. In addition, you will practice personal safety and survival skills. Students 60+ pay fee only.
